Oceania skim milk powder prices are higher this week, driven by near-term contracts. The SMP price index at GDT event 340 increased 5.4 percent, as North Asia buyers drove demand by making larger purchases. Some buyers remain out of the market, believing an expected increase in supplies will cause future price declines. Early season production in Australia and New Zealand is still low, along seasonal lines. Supplies are sufficient. In Australia, the current emphasis is to prioritize sending milk to SMP/butter production at the expense of other manufactured dairy products. In New Zealand, SMP export volumes are higher than last year at this time. The market undertone is firm.
